PRESS RELEASE

On the evening of Friday, October 11, Liberty House's CEO, Alison Kelley, was presented the inaugural "Force for Good" award in recognition of going above and beyond to advocate for children. The special "Light the Way" dinner took place at the Multnomah Athletic Club and was hosted by the Oregon Network of Child Abuse Intervention Centers (ONCAIC), a nonprofit that connects the 21+ child abuse centers throughout Oregon.

Alison has been a member of the ONCAIC board of directors for 6 years and is the Immediate Past Chair of the Board. She is humbled by the award and honored to work with so many incredible individuals working to make the world a better place for children.

A warm thanks goes out to the many people who attended the event in support of Alison, including Liberty House Board Chair Rich Duncan and his wife Shelley, board members Keeta Lauderdale and her husband Ray, Jim Green and his wife Rep. Raquel Moore-Green, and George Jennings, as well as Alison's Daughter and son-in-law Jessie and Bayo Falase.

A special thanks also goes out to Ted Davis, CEO of Airstream Adventures NW, the title sponsor of the event, for sponsoring and attending the event, the fellow executive who joined him, and the legislators who also attended.
